Having scrapped the Treasury's $10,500,000,000 tax program, which at no time seriously considered, the House Ways and Means Committee is leaning toward a "no tax increase" revenue bill. Boosts in individual rates have been rejected, and indications are that the same treatment will be accorded corporations.

Members of both parties of the Committee have united solidly against many new taxes, contending that present individual, corporate, and excise levies are adequate if the Administration conscientiously tries to economize. The Committee has tentatively approved a five-point program designed to integrate the present Victory Tax with the income tax structure so that most of the 9,000,000 persons now subject to the Victory Tax (but who would have been relieved of all Federal taxes under the Treasury's plan) would still be retained with the tax fold.

On final Congressional action on a 1943 tax bill hangs the fate of several other vital problems, such as the increase in the Social Security tax, the question of reforms in the Contract Renegotiation Law, and the problem of contract termination policy.

The feud is still raging between Lindsay Warren, Comptroller General, and Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, over who shall have contract termination authority. Congressmen are watching with interest the adoption of future policy by the new Joint Price Adjustment Committee which will have broad powers over renegotiation of war contracts. This has a direct bearing on contract termination since the Committee's activities may have an important influence on terminations policies that Congress writes.

Two Department of Justice economists, G. P. Comer and F. E. Berquist, have prepared a study on post-war production policies, which urges "to decide upon a program of version, industry by industry, lay the cards on the table as soon as strategy will permit, and let the public know the plans." They suggest that it may be advisable to "freeze" 1942 models of consumer products for a stated period after the war to avoid the scramble and delay that would be involved in rushing new products onto the market.

Another bitter showdown fight on the Capitol horizon is that between organized farm groups and the Administration over the question of subsidies, with the former determined to oppose the latter's subsidy program in any form.

The OPA is going to undertake national opinion surveys to learn what the public thinks about the agency. According to an OPA official, the surveys are not designed to "sell" the OPA to the public but to help the agency improve its administration.

Norwegians Boycott Nazi Sports Event

SMUGGLED TO THE U. S. by the Norwegian underground, this photo of a Nazi-sponsored track meet at Oslo's famed Bislet stadium speaks for itself. This August track meet—the World Series is to Americans—was this year a scene for an effective, silent demonstration of resistance to German occupation: the handful of spectators in German uniforms testify. The stadium seats 30,000 members of the Norwegian Athletic Union have flatly refused to take part in Nazi-staged events. Many of them, including the world's champion ski-jumper Birger Ruud, are in concentration camps, as a result.

SPEAKING OF HEALTH

Food Fights for Freedom

The month of November has been officially designated as the first "Food for Freedom" month in a continuing campaign to awake the public consciousness to the importance of food in our all-out war effort.

Certain misconceptions about the part of food in this war have become fairly common.

For instance, we hear such talk as this, upon occasion: "Our armed forces get most of the food," and "we're sending too much food to our allies." Besides being entirely untrue, such statements can do real harm to the war effort.

Believing and spreading such misconceptions is a form of sabotage.

Misconceptions Dangerous

Actually, we are sending only 10 per cent of our total food supply to our allies. Our armed forces consume 13 per cent. With the 2 per cent that goes to our good neighbors, a total of only 25 per cent goes to war—while 75 per cent stays home to feed our civilian population. Few patriotic civilians would "squawk" if they knew this important fact.

American industry has made marvelous contributions on the "food front" in this war. For instance, we have heard of the new dehydrated and frozen foods and of the new compact soldier rations developed by the food industry in cooperation with the military. But food miracles on the production front alone are not enough.

What Civilians Can Do

Those of us on the home front are asked to make food fight for freedom. There are four principal ways to do this:

1. Produce as much food as possible—on the farm and, wherever possible, in Victory Gardens.

2. Conserve food—by wasting nothing, preserving, substituting plentiful for scarce foods, serving nutritious food for health and strength.

3. Share food—by exhibiting an understanding attitude toward "land lease" and toward food for our own fighting men. Military leaders know best how much is needed; trust them.

4. Play square—by shunning and reporting black markets, buying rationed food only with ration stamps, and paying no more than legal ceiling prices.

Making America Strong

PORTABLE DARKROOM

An increasingly important war job is aerial photography of changing enemy positions to anticipate sudden moves. The reports of American reconnaissance planes which fly over Axis lines and photograph their activities have proven invaluable in planning campaigns.

One of the chief difficulties however, was that there isn't always time to take films back to a base to be developed after each trip. Often the information is needed instantly. That is why a manufacturer of photographic equipment got the idea for a portable darkroom that could be flown to the front and set up behind the lines. This films can be dropped by a parachute and prints could be finished in five minutes or less.

One of the problems encountered in designing the tent was to find a material which would keep it absolutely dark without the faintest ray of light. A material had to be found that wouldn't crack or let in pinholes of light. It had to be waterproof, proof against photographic chemicals, and able to stand the hard use of field service.

This is the flexible material used by industry before the war as a waterproof coating on shower curtains, raincoats, etc., came into the picture. The next, making it lightweight, was solved by the manufacturer who made a tent of alternate layers of the material and light-weight airplane fabric bonded together. The outer layer is green for camouflage, the inner layer is black to keep out all light. And because the material won't harden or crack, the tent can be rolled into a small bundle as often as necessary.

LI. Col. Rigley Gives Some Of Difficulties We're Up Against

There is no wishful thinking or early optimism on New Georgia or Guadalcanal, according to Lieutenant Colonel Orin H. Rigley, Jr., Air Corps operations officer of U. S. 13th Air Force Bomber Command, on his return to the United States.

There are many reasons for the slow advance. The difficult jungle terrain, the terrific heat which will be worse than usual in the next five months, the over-present mud, all contribute.

"It's the only place in the world where you can stand in mud up to your knees and get dust in your eyes. That's how fast the sun dries out mud when it reaches it through the jungle foliage," states Lieutenant Colonel Orin H. Rigley, Jr.

American ingenuity has played an important role in our Solomon's victories, Colonel Rigley said. The men think up an answer to nearly any situation. He cited the case of one pilot, who had been sent on three moonlight missions to hunt for Japanese shipping as skip bombing targets. Each time his search was fruitless and returned with his bombs. The fourth time out he had the same luck, so he decided he would bomb Munda on the way home, despite the fact that he had delayed action type bombs which are used for skip bombing.

Turning the plane over to the copilot, he crawled out to the open bomb bay doors, removed the delayed action fuses and then went back to the controls. Since no bombardier or bomb-sight is carried on skip bombing missions, the pilot tied a piece of rope to his arm, then passed the other end of the rope to the navigator who knelt up the plane with the drift meter for a run over the target. As the plane went over Munda airfield, the navigator signaled by yanking the rope and the pilot released the bombs and the crew chalked up their first successful mission.

Private Scott

The Textorian gladly welcomes Private Robert M. Scott back to this country and rejoices in the fact that he has improved so favorably from the ordeal which he has endured while serving his country.

We would like to call the particular attention of our readers to an article which appeared in the Greensboro Daily News Wednesday morning, in which Private Scott urged us not to take our duties and responsibilities lightly because of the favorable war reports.

This valiant paratrooper certainly knows what war is, and he realizes the importance of a serious-minded, loyal home front. He knows only too well what can happen to his buddies on the firing lines if they are not furnished with adequate amounts of supplies and equipment. What we are trying to say is that when Private Scott urges us to give our best in producing that he is talking from experience and he is representing our armed forces all over the world.

We, too, would like to commend to our readers serious consideration of Private Scott's comments about the functioning of the Red Cross. Unfortunately, from time to time a rumor is spread which causes some people to discount the effectiveness of that great organization. Private Scott, who has spent many days in German prison camps, realizes only too well the splendid work that the American Red Cross is doing, and we are glad that he is paying tribute to that all-important service the Red Cross is rendering our boys who have been captured and put in prison camps.

It should also be remembered that another organization is functioning well in giving a certain amount of relief and comfort to our boys in prison camps. Only several weeks ago a Community War Chest Drive was put on in our community. One of the agencies which receives its chief support from the Community War Chest is the War Prisoner Aid Organization. It is our understanding that much of the material going into prison camps is furnished by that agency and that the Red Cross is instrumental in seeing that those things furnished by the agency actually get to the boys in the prison camps.

Private Scott not only served his country and his fellow citizens well in the theater of war, but he is continuing to serve us all by letting us know it is our duty and responsibility not to let up but to continue to back our fighting boys one hundred per cent.

by Marion Hargrove

SYNOPSIS

Private Hargrove tell of the sudden transition from rookies into hardened, battle-ready soldiers. His final story concerns the spirit of the troops as they complete their basic training and leave the replacement center for their permanent army post.

ON WITH THE STORY

The major, a former criminologist and schoolteacher in Birmingham, was a lean and mischievous-looking infantry officer with a gift of gab and a camaraderie with the enlisted men. He sauntered into the Service Club, noisily about that he was going to talk, and hooked up the public address microphone.

"Here it comes," said an unhappy sergeant. "Here comes the high-brain, to tell us the worst."

The major cleared his throat and looked over the crowd which gathered about him. "I know that this is your Service Club," he said, "and I'm a staff officer hanging in on you. Before I was an officer, I was an enlisted man. And as an enlisted man, I've done more KP than any man in this room."

"I have my own ideas about the American Way. I think the American Way is shown in you boys whose parents paid school taxes so that you could know what it was to cut hooky. It's shown in the men who pay to see a wrestling match, not to wait for the wrestlers but to boo the referee. It's the good old go-to-hell American spirit and you can't find it anywhere but here.

"You and I both, when we were called into the Army, brought our homes with us. We've been thinking less about war than about getting back home after a while—back to our girls and our wives and our civilian jobs."

"Well, we know now where we are."

NOTICE, when you open your pack of Camels, the rich, fresh aroma of cooler tobaccos—taste their full, broad flavor, and notice how cool-smoking and slow-burning they are... good reasons why Camels are FIRST IN THE SERVICE

The favorite cigarette with men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard is Camel. (Based on actual sales records.)

SOTHAT Yanks from Sicily to the Solomons will get their cigarettes fresh, the way they like 'em, Camels are packed to seal in that famous Camel flavor and mildness anywhere... for months at a time.

stand and we don't have to worry about whether we're in for a long stretch or a short vacation. That should be cleared up now. We know that we've got only one job now and we haven't time to worry about the one at home.

"You're worrying because you're not prepared soldiers, you're not ready to fight. When the time comes for you to go, you'll be ready. You'll have your fundamental training before you leave the Replacement Center."

"Even if war is declared tomorrow, you'll be taught for a while here. And if war were declared tonight, we'd still have our Service Club and our movies and our athletics. During our off hours, we would. That's part of the American Way."

"Spending your duty hours at work and your leisure hours at worry—that's no good. That's what the enemy wants for you."

The major stopped again and looked at the soldiers seated at writing tables and the ones waiting for the telephone. "Someone once told me that the best thing to do with a letter you're not sure should be sent is to hang on to it for twenty-four hours. You might apply that to those letters you're writing now. I'm not going to write my family until tomorrow."

"Don't write or telephone home when you're under a strain like this. Your parents and friends are worrying about you now and there's no need to feed their worries. The letters most of you are writing are going to disturb your people back home, and they're going to write letters back that will react on you. Nobody's going to get anywhere like that."

"Relax for a while. Have a beer somewhere or get into a good argument or just go home and sleep it off."

Then write home when you've had time to think it over. Let your letters be reassuring; you owe it to your folks.

"I guess that's all, boys." He turned to leave the microphone, but returned as if he had suddenly remembered something.

"The regular variety show will go on tonight at eight o'clock," he said. (To Be Continued)

It takes both... ham and eggs go together for a meal. War Bonds and the Taxes go together for money to win the war. Buy more War Bonds.

Presenting Sweet Potatoes
Surplus of supply will re-write this winter's menus. will promote to national importance many local foods. The sweet potato is a case in point. Hitherto known mainly in the Southland (where no day's eating is replete without a dish of yams), and along the Eastern coastal plan (where the Jersey flourishes), the sweet potato is destined now to travel and win country-wide acclaim!

Our farmers grew a bumper crop. cille Ritter, Myrtle Cockman, Eda Hinshaw, W. L. Newnam and Misses Fannie Ivey, Ruth Moffitt, Jane Byrd, Helen Lefler, Phronie Blake and Sally Burgess.

last summer, so there will be enough for all. The sweet potato is nutritionally important, being rich in vitamins, easily digested sugars, and heat-stoking calories—all vital factors that will increase the value of meager wartime meals. Sweet potatoes are both flavorful and filling, too, no minor item these days when other foods are scarce.

Two main varieties will appear in many of your markets: the dry, firm, yellow-meated Jersey sweet, and the Deep-South yam, with its soft, moist-textured orange flesh. Best buy in Jersey sweets is a smooth, spindle-shaped tuber of medium size, tapering towards the ends. Select yams that are full-bodied and chunky, plumper than Jerseys, with similar pointed ends.

Avoid odd shapes and off sizes. Stick to bright clean sweets without blemishes or scars. Buy in quantities and store, if you have a cool dry place to keep them. Otherwise shop as needed, for sweet potatoes are perishable unless correctly cured.

Both kinds may be boiled, baked.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.
